HONGKONG, MAY 8TH, 1894.

THE Singapore Debating Society has been discussing the question: "That at the present time an income tax should be introduced into the Colony." One of the speakers, Mr. BROTHERHAD MATTHEWS, very pertinently remarked that this was a very dangerous question to raise, and he referred to the bearing the discussion might have on the military contribution question and the efforts that are being made to have the amount of the contribution reduced. The chief interest of the debate, however, lay in the remarks made by the Hon. W. R. COLLYER, the Attorney-General, who is the President of the Debating Society and seconded the motion. He was, of course, not speaking as the Attorney-General, but the views he expressed are those held by the Attorney-General, and they would no doubt be noted upon by him should the question ever present itself to him officially. Having expressed his approval of an income tax in the abstract, Mr. COLLYER went on to say that the great difficulty felt in the Straits was that the revenue was so inelastic. He referred to the opium revenue, and the falling off which had taken place in that source of income, and said that whether the demands of the exchequer were more or less in one year than in another, there was not the same elasticity about such a tax as that on opium as there was in one like the income tax. An income tax is no doubt an elastic one; it is such an easy matter to add a penny to it whenever the revenue does not balance the expenditure. In the abstract, too, the tax may be a fair one; but it would be impossible to apply it in places like Singapore or Hongkong. Mr. COLLYER said it had not been shown how an income tax would be inappropriate, nor that it could not be collected as well as in England, nor that the same safeguards with regard to exemption would not apply. In reply to this the failure of the experiment in India was referred to and appears fairly conclusive. But so far as the local circumstances of Singapore are concerned, and we may add Hongkong, for the circumstances of the two colonies are similar, scarcely such evidence is needed, for to any one having experience of the Chinese the hopelessness of securing from them anything like an approximately accurate statement of their incomes must appear self-evident. Mr. COLLYER, however, is a new comer in the Straits and has evidently not yet become familiar with the local conditions. In Hongkong fortunately the public finances are not embarrassed to the same extent that they are in the Straits, and with the economies in expenditure that are expected to result from the labours of the Retrenchment Committee, it is permissible to hope that the day when it will be necessary to consider increased taxation may be very far distant. If such a day should ever arrive, an income tax ought to be one of the last expedients thought of.

With regard to the amount paid to the Imperial Exchequer for military protection Mr. COLLYER said in the Singapore debate, he could see no reason why for this same protection there as in England the same sum should not be paid, a view we endorse that the British taxpayer paid for naval protection than did the inhabitants of the Straits, who he believed were the most lightly taxed of any under the British sceptre. That may be, but it must not be forgotten that the lightness of taxation, especially the freedom of the ports and the absence of any such harassment as would attend the collection of an income tax, has been one of the principal factors in building up the prosperity of the Far Eastern Colonies. And light as taxation may be in Hongkong, as compared with what it is in England with its enormous wealth, the fact must not be lost sight of, in considering the case of this Colony in particular, that it is heavy from the native point of view, and that many who would be glad to keep their families here on account of the greater security and other advantages they would enjoy, are nevertheless compelled for economical reasons to keep them in China.

MR. J. B. SCOTT writes to the St. James's Gazette:—It may perhaps interest some of your readers to know that the identical cap in which Mrs. Noble was carried about in China is said to be seen at the Royal United Service Museum, Whitehall. I have seen it quite lately and can vouch for the genuineness of the article; but even I had not realised how small it was. The model of a female figure has been placed in it; but as it is that of a Chinese woman, who are generally small, it does not in the least represent the torture Mrs. Noble, who was taller than most women, must have endured.

The last number of the China Review contains a continuation of Mr. E. H. Parker's paper on Turko-Scythian Tribes, a translation of Minister Sieh's memorial addressed to the Emperor recommending the repeal of the law against Chinese emigrating to foreign parts, a contribution by Mr. P. G. von Mollendorff on the Ghilyak language, a readable paper by Mr. C. A. Montalto de Jesus on Macao's Deeds of Arms, a useful and interesting paper by Mr. William Stanton on the Triad Society, and "A Comparative Study of Northern Chinese Dialects" by Dr. A. Forke, together with the usual notices of new books and other literary intelligence.

We are indebted to the Spanish Consul for a copy of the following telegram despatched from Manila at 5.03 p.m. yesterday:—"There are indications of a depression to the East of Luzon." When depressions begin to be reported we may hope that the much longed for rain is not far distant. There is, we believe, enough water in the reservoirs to last for ten days more at the present limited rate of supply, and if rain does not fall by that time the position will be serious. Some years ago when a water famine prevailed enquiries were made from the shipping in harbour as to what amount of water could be obtained from their condensing apparatus, but fortunately rain fell in time to prevent the necessity of recourse to that source of supply.

MR. KILLELEA, who was here about two years ago, is still wandering over the face of the earth, bringing to light its beauties, and may be some of its horrors, for the entertainment and instruction of the world in general and the benefit of the famous firm of art-publishers, Messrs. Kiburn Bros., of Littleton, New Hampshire, in particular. To enable us weary exiles to keep in the foremost files of time he has brought with him two of Edison's latest phonographs, which will give us not weak imitations but the actual voices of the great speakers and the famous singers of the day, from orations that are stirring the soul of humanity down to the latest comic song, and the sounds of all sweet instruments executed by the greatest talent of that time can all be heard at the Victoria Hotel for fifty cents, which is only a shilling. As Mr. Killelea proceeds to Manila by an early steamer this treat will only be available for a few days.

From the Rising Sun we learn that Captain Astromoff, I.R.N., late commander of H.I.R.M.S. Senoutch, died at Nagasaki on the 18th ult. of heart disease, after a short illness, and on the 20th his remains were interred in the foreign cemetery at Inasa, with full naval honours. The funeral procession from Naminohira Hill to the Sagarimatsu Hatoba and across the harbour in boats was most impressive, the solemnity of the event being enhanced by the appropriate music played by the band, and by the minute-guns fired from the Seoutch. The deceased's wife was in attendance as chief mourner, and amongst those who formed the procession were Governor Ohmori, Admiral Tyrtow and staff; Captains Elchsninoff, Lavroff, and Spitsky, and a large number of fellow officers; several foreign Consuls and a number of private residents; detachments from three Russian men-of-war in port, etc. In accordance with the usual custom the flags of the various Consulates and men-of-war were lowered to half-mast during the funeral ceremony.

The Japan Herald writes as follows on the opening of the Yokohama tea market:—The market for new teas opened fully a week earlier than usual. A few small parcels arrived in time for shipment by the City of Rio and the Empress of China on the 21st April, but the Gaelic leaving May 4th will really be considered the first steamer of the season, as the amount of tonnage available by her is, however, but limited, shipments will consequently be comparatively light. Arrivals of new leaf to date amount to about 3,000 piculs, which have been eagerly bought up at higher dollar prices than were paid last season, but owing to the present low rate of exchange the laying down cost will be considerably lower than last year's figures. The quality of the crop so far as can be judged at present is decidedly better than last season's, especially as regards the leaf, but the cup quality does not show much improvement. The prices ruling at present are: Fine $31-33½; Finest $34-36½; Choice $37-39½; Choicest $40-44; and Extra Choicest $45-50 per picul.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, held at Montreal on the 4th April, all the proceedings were unanimous. The report for the year 1893 shows that the gross earnings amounted to $20,053,317, the expenses to $13,220,901, and the net earnings to $6,744,416. The interest earned from deposits and loans amounted to $206,882 and the fixed charges to $5,338,587. The surplus for the year, after payments of dividends, amounted to $1,612,682 and the accumulated surplus to $1,616,613. The directors hoped that the loss in the first quarter would be made up later, but the extraordinary decline in the price of wheat and the depression in trade on the Pacific coast caused a loss during the last two months of the year, and a decrease in the earnings has to be reported for the first time. Notwithstanding the unsatisfactory traffic returns, the company's position at the end of the year was exceedingly good.

The British ship Drumellan was stranded on the 25th ultimo on Nagshanoshima, South Tanemura, Kumage-gun. Part of the crew arrived here yesterday by the P. & O. steamer Ancona, Captain Cowel and the officers and apprentices remaining at Nagasaki. The Drumellan was a four-masted vessel of 1,883 tons net register and was on a voyage from Shanghai to Tacoma in ballast when the disaster occurred. She left Shanghai on the 19th April and on the night of the 25th, after a period of thick hazy weather, she was found to be close inshore, having evidently been carried in by the current, and before she could be put about she grounded. It was calm at the time and the crew remained on board until next day, when they landed in the ship's boats, afterwards proceeding to Nagasaki. The owners of the Drumellan are Messrs. Gillies and Chadwick of Liverpool. Her last voyage was from New York to Shanghai with a cargo of kerosine.

"IN SOCIETY" AT THE CITY HALL.

A large and appreciative audience witnessed the performance of "In Society" at the Theatre last night, and although the thermometer was very high and fans were in requisition, the trifling discomfort was scarcely noticed in the enjoyment of the piece. As usual the attention of the house was absorbed in the interest of the play and the frequent applause evoked by the admirable acting testified to the thorough appreciation of the audience.

"In Society" is a play which has appeared under various titles and been identified with many notable names. It illustrates the love affairs of the Baroness d'Ange, a lady with a past who has become imbued with the determination to be married. Her futile efforts in this direction constitutes the "plot" of the piece and the story of her intrigues for this purpose provide many opportunities for very forcible and effective acting. In spite, however, of forged certificates and very cunningly laid plans the Baroness is unable to capture the coveted partner of her joys and the piece ends at a point at which it might well be continued. The Baroness declares her intention to devote her life to charitable and philanthropic work, but the fall of the curtain in the last act fails to leave any satisfactory feeling in the minds of the audience.

Though the play in itself possesses little of merit, having no particular purpose or story, there are many opportunities in it for good acting. As the Baroness d'Ange, a widow of title who never had either husband or title and who is an accomplished prevaricator, Mrs. Potter was admirable. Throughout the whole of the play she was most pleasing, graceful, and charming, and of course tastefully costumed. As usual, she acted with spirit and force and was always, when on the boards, followed with keen interest by the audience. Mr. Ballew in the role of Olivier de Jalin, an artist with a social position, was in his most courteous and vivacious mood and displayed his ability to the best advantage in a part which suited him well. The minor roles were also adequately filled Miss Sallie Booth personated the Viscomtesse de Veraisen capably, and Mrs. Crofton did full justice to Madame de Santes. As Raymond de Nanjac Mr. Arthur Bawtree played with spirit and as M. de Santes, the indifferent husband, Mr. Russell Crawford did what little he had to do with ability.

To-night the Company will perform "Forget-me-not" at Canton and on Thursday we shall see them again in "Camille." For Saturday "She Stoops to Conquer" is billed.

POLICE COURT.

7th May.

BEFORE MR. H. E. WODEHOUSE.

ALLEGED ARSON.

Chan Sik Ming and Chan Si Ki, apprentices, were charged with attempting to set fire to No. 7, Queen's Road West, occupied by Chü Kwok Ting.

Complainant stated that on the 6th inst. the first defendant, who had previously been employed by the firm, came into the shop carrying up his sleeve a large joss stick. About 11 o'clock at night witness was awakened by a flash of light and saw the joss stick burning behind the counter near a box containing shavings, which had become ignited. It appeared that the joss stick was wrapped round with matches and a packet of gunpowder which complainant believed had been ignited when he was awakened by a flash of light. The accused had been in complainant's employ for about twelve months. He had beaten the first defendant for negligence.

Wing Shing, sergeant interpreter at the Central Station, said that when charged the first defendant said, "Yes. I did set fire to it. The second defendant bought the candle and gunpowder." Second defendant replied "The first defendant told me to buy the joss stick."

His Worship committed both prisoners for trial at the Criminal Sessions.

BEFORE COMMANDER W. C. H. HASTINGS.

Fuk Ha, a coolie, was charged by Mr. J. H. Logan, preventive officer, Hongkong, Canton and Macao Steamboat Company, with having 650 taels of prepared opium in his possession on board the Powan on the 5th inst.

Mr. H. L. Dennys defended.

Fung Shing said that at 9 p.m. he was going from the lower to the upper deck on board the Powan when he met the defendant with a box on his shoulder. He accosted the defendant, who said that he did not know what the box contained.

Defendant produced a certificate from the Opium Farm and was discharged.

The Queen has laid out about £25,000 within the last three years on the new Indian Room at Osborne, and now a further addition is to be made to the palace, which will involve a total expenditure of some £7,500. It has been decided to enlarge Osborne House by adding twenty-four bedrooms and two bath-rooms. These new rooms are intended for members of suites and servants, as when the palace is full during the Queen's summer residence there, the accommodation is quite inadequate. Much inconvenience has been experienced, particularly during the annual visit to Cowes of the German Emperor.

"IT was alarming enough to read the other day of the ingenious villain who, in order to get rid of his virtuous rival, smeared the door handle of a room the latter was about to enter with a mixture of serpent's venom and powdered glass. This was only done in a novel, however, but now, it seems, that poisoned gloves (à la Medici) are being actually sent round to prominent Russian officials by Nihilist enthusiasts. But up to the present time no mischief has been done, for, to a man, the officials have refused to put their hands in the gloves sent to them. On the other hand the malicious senders already find to several cases that they have put their foot in it!

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our Correspondents.]

"INTERESTING CASES."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

SIR,—Just as you are pleased at finding faults, you are displeased at finding perfections.—Locutor.

SIR,—My reason for not silencing the most unwarily prattle of the garrulous sermonizer, who dared to face me with my own weapon and under the vague initial "W." bally the poor dead man Marshall, is that it would have been time, ink, and paper uselessly expended, especially as his letter was thoroughly impregnated with the high social and moral odour of the "Model Settlement" of Shanghai, whose standard of morals, although he adopts it, is beneath my notice and below contempt. If this mawler of the dead dislikes the good old saying De mortuis nil nisi bonum, he would hate it still more if in this case verum, as it should be, were substituted for bonum. I am glad to see, however, that he has not altogether passed off unchallenged and unreproved, and that others besides myself see the injustice and inhumanity of his attack. In spite of all that has been said, and all that is said to have been done for poor Thomas Marshall, I adhere to all that I wrote in my first letter, and as bigoted Shanghailander with his kick-a-dog-when-he-is-down policy will change or bias the opinion I have formed concerning him or his death. We have no right to set ourselves up as the exemplary judges of those living or, much more, of those departed. Let the dead past bury its dead. Let their bones repose in undisturbed peace and their souls in harmonious tranquility until the Great Day of Judgment. If we but defer our decision and reserve our sentence for that great day we shall then have quite sufficient to do to answer for our own manifold transgressions without heeding those that do not concern us. If the gentleman under review is a latin scholar, I respectfully beg to take leave of him with the following quotation, Mortua leguli et lepores insultant, which I think is applicable if not appropriate in this case.—I am, sir, yours very faithfully,

C. J. H. H.

OUR PARIS LETTER.

PARIS, 7th April.

After each explosion of an anarchist bomb, public indignation rushes up to boiling point, but it runs down as rapidly when some new event intervenes, as a fight with the Omnibus Company over the correspondence tickets or the phenomenally sunny weather that is suspected, out of sheer love of opposition and incredulity. Then when relative calm ensues, pif! paf! another momento mori bomb from the anarchists of course explodes where never expected, and again the squirrel in the round cage of indignation. And this kind of ever-turning cycle of barbarity and scare proutt go to endure. The bomb placed under an flower pot on the outside of the window sill of the Café Foyot confusses one conjecture. Perhaps it was intended to facilitate the inquiries of Colonel Majandie, who has come from London to study how the anarchists work in Paris. The restaurant Foyot is in a quiet branch street near to the Senate, and the latter is guarded by soldiers; close by are the barracks of the mounted police. But anarchy, like love, laughs at locksmiths; the tavern itself is famous for its bombes, but they are made of ice and cream; and melt, never explode. The Senators being on vacation the end could not have been to hoist the Fathers, but to show that, like Figaro, the anarchists are here, there, and everywhere, constantly turning up like a bad shilling or a poor relation. They select no particular social layer; they prefer to destroy Society en bloc—the best method to comprehend the 1789 Revolution, according to M. Clemenceau—and while in different to massacres of men, women, and children, only display anxiety to shield themselves. They do not mind if some of their own well-wishers be jollied by the green powder, the iron chips, the hob nails, bullets, and spikes of old spurs that compose their canister shot.

Thus, in the Foyot explosion, their own poet laureate, M. Taillade, was hit; his eye was not blown out of but into his head, and an anarchist trade-mark further effected by opening his skull from eye-brow to ear. He is a "young man" of good family, rich, and related to men in power; he poses by his paradoxes, and exercised the position licences by celebrating the "beautiful gesta" of Vaillant, not when his head was struck off, but after he pitched his bomb into the midst of the deputies. The poet also sang the glories of the anarchist "propagation by action," and they repaid him by their peculiar poetic justice. It will be interesting to glance at Taillade's next edition of his poetry, as to how far it will be revised and corrected. He is a master in get up; is 37 years of age—at thirty says Young, man suspects himself to be a fool—wears a Henri IV. beard, and has a stoop, perhaps due to the Atlas burden of his stanzas. He has a disagreeable, crow-catarrh voice. But as Teodles explained to Miss For, his rough voice was due to "ashes, Mum, not cruntiness."

The royalists and the advanced republicans—for extremes meet—need not expect to make capital out of the epidemic of anarchy. The advent of a king could not cure that "crin" by "touch;" nor will opinion accept the republicans theory that the anarchists are lunatics—with a terrible method in their madness, however—and merit but an asylum, cold douches, and straight jackets. The scoundrels who tranquilly and deliberately prepare their explosives and mitraille, study where to place their weapon, concerned only to secure a safe retreat from the death they dole out to an assembly of innocents, must be exterminated. The only law for them is the lex talionus. Their fury, however blind, is always surrounded with prudence. It is they who attack, who fire the first. If the assassins desire to escape death for their misdeeds, let them commence by observing the Decalogue—"Thou shalt do no murder."

Not the labouring classes, but the militant Socialists, are fomenting for May-Daying. It will be dangerous work in the present state of irritated opinion and the wave of authoritism that animates the Government to play at manifestations. There is no music to be thrummed out of that guitar. The true artisans have taken up position, to await the report of the Grand Parliamentary Commission that is dealing with the several projects for the amelioration of labour. The Platt-Salford experiment of eight hours a day has made a profound impression on the employing and the employed classes in France; so has the new scheme of work hours adopted in the English dockyards and War Office department. Labour has everything to gain in France by patience. Victory is often only the science of waiting. To enable capital and labour to reconcile their differences the public will be expected to contribute its share to that triple alliance by accepting augmentation in prices; so far as no partner obtains all the cake, or can pull all the blanket over himself, no objection is to be made. Humanity henceforth has entered into political economy.

M. Charles de Lesseps has been formally struck off that head roll of fame the Legion of Honour. It was "a thing got through dodo" after his being sentenced to imprisonment. His father is not included in the strike out because he has never been legally condemned for Panamaism; neither has M. Tour Eiffel, who apparently secured one of the golden eggs when the goose was killed. The bell, book, and candle-light excommunication from the order of the Legion of Honour is painfully simple and severe. A thief on the cross may be pardoned at the twelfth hour and be guaranteed paradise, but no such amnesty can be expected when the Chancellerie of the Order shuts the door against an alumnus. President Carnot being the Grand Master of the Order, when a member's conduct is questionable, he forwards the plaint to the Council of the Order; they decide if the offender is to be acquitted, or censured, suspended, or expelled, and the President ratifies the finding. As an officer in the army and navy when arraigned at once deposits his sword; so a member of the Legion of Honour who was [illegible] wrong hands in his cross, his red ribbon or rosette, and his parchments. Found guilty, the accused is ruled "to have failed in honour and unworthy to continue to belong to the Legion." The Commissary of the Police of his ward, or if in the provinces the local representative of the public prosecutor, invites the condemned to come and hear the sentence read, and to give a receipt for the copy of same handed him. More generally the official in a spirit of charity calls on the dishonoured. If the address of the latter be unknown, a copy of the sentence is left with the concierge of his last known home, and noted on the register where he has been civilly baptized. Il finit la musica.

Newspapers in France cannot adopt the coupon system of working advertisements; but they can offer prizes to subscribers, from a box of a dozen oranges up to a Gladstone bag and a knock-about suit of clothes. Only Rochefort's paper has adopted the scheme of guaranteeing a free insurance to the possessor of a copy of his paper in case of accidental death. But the French do not see the advantage of securing a lump of money to pay Charon for ferrying them across the bourne from whence no traveller returns. Now does the play of money rewards for solving letter X world puzzles attract, the compensations not capital—a few francs to indemnify for the wear and tear of brain, and a diploma with a tricolor ribbon attached, asserting the recipient's ability as a cryptographist, is not remunerative. Neither the butcher, nor baker, nor the monte-de-piété will advance anything upon it and if, perceived by a detective it may lead to arrest as a new explosive or the proof of adhesion to some illegal society. Still those newspapers, and not a few of an unimportant character, that undertake to purchase goods at a reduction below retail prices for original subscribers and constant readers do make money. But the syndicate of shopkeepers is to indict them for trading without a licence. Like May, the newspaper never is, but always to be, blessed.

The sister republic, Switzerland, is again down on France for her China wall protectionism. Helvetia will no longer permit the railway to deliver bundles of French newspapers; for the future each copy must pass through the post office. That will be a blow for the French press. Retaliation is out of the question, as few Swiss journals enter France.

The weather continues to be as splendid as any tyrant or the proprietor of a dock of a bonnet or a new hat could desire. The only objection urged is that the more genial the weather, the more rapid vegetation, the more spring salads, potatoes, &c., milk, butter, and soft cheeses, run up in price. Food supplies never run down in France; the present market exclusionism is attributed to the timely prudence of sellers, who anticipate the Minister of Finance is about making a sensible increase in the demands on the tax-paying pockets of patriots including those foreigners permitted to share—Hobson's choice—in that side of French hospitality, and which is truly proverbial.

M. de Lanessan, the Governor of French Indo-China, has arrived in Paris with a suite worthy of a Republican Dunbar. He will have a hot time of it, as he is accused of having mixed that Empire. He himself asserts that Tonkin, Annam, &c., could not be more prosperous. His adversaries commence by naming his successor, and M. Yves-Guyot, ex-Minister of Public Works, and present editor of the Siècle, is selected as the coming man. If so, the appointment is unobjectionable. Guyot would reduce the high tariffs in the colony, as he is a noted free trader, and he would organize inducements for young men to settle down in the Far East, which they would do, only it is so far away from the Boulevards, the five o'clock absinthe, and no excursion trains thereto on Sundays.

The Soleil, the organ of the Comte de Paris, has raised a sorrel's nest about its ears. It attributes the decadence of the population of France to the abolition of the law of primogeniture, and many think like the journal, and to the ideal that has been implanted in the minds of parents of the well-to-do classes, to limit their family to one or at most two children, who can lead a life of idleness on their wealth. Hence the reason the population dwindles in France, and flourishes like the seed of Abraham in Canada, the States, England, Germany, Russia, and in other philoprogeniture realms. Emile Angier hits the nail on the head in one of his plays, where he represents the attorney, Chabrière, so overjoyed at the prosperity of his business that he exclaims to his wife in Castle confidence, "If that continues we can give ourselves the luxury of a second infant." In France to-day a second little stranger is viewed as the barometer of material well-being. Baby number two is a "luxury."

A wife and husband drew up a deed divorcing one another in the sense that each was free to love what life they pleased. The wife at once took a lover home, like Mrs. Johnson; the husband disliked this and had her and her morganatic husband arrested. The culprits were only fined 50 fr.

Recently a man and a miser forgot his pile of 105,000 fr. in notes in a bus; the conductor found it; the owner gave him 20 fr. reward only. The police Prefect, disgusted at that, calls upon the owner to establish how he acquired the money.

THE "KWANG TUNG" AND "NGAPOOTA" COLLISION.

As already reported, the above Straits owned vessels came into collision off Pangkor at midnight on the 23rd April. The following further particulars are taken from the Penang Gazette:—

25th April.

The probability is that all on board the Kwang Tung have been rescued. Thirty more passengers from the Ngapoota were brought into Port Weld this morning by Inspector Hughes from Pasir Hitam, and have gone to Penang in the steamer Mariedy.

The deplorable collision recorded above, attended with the loss of several lives—actual number not known yet, but estimated to be over sixty—was between two well-known vessels which ply between this and Teluk Anson. The master of the Ngapoota was Capt. Witt and of the Kwang Tung Capt. Cobb, two of the most popular ship-masters in these waters. It appears that Capt. Witt was on the eve of leaving for home, this sad trip being the last he intended making before his departure. It is not, however, known for certain that he has been drowned.

The managing owner of the Ngapoota, Mr. Cheah Yu Kay, has kindly furnished us with the following additional details. The Ngapoota sailed from Teluk Anson for this port at 5 o'clock on Monday evening. She left Pangkor at 10.30 p.m., and the collision took place at about 12.30 a.m. on Tuesday, after she had passed Tanjong Hantu. At the time of the collision, the captain and shinchew, Mr. Lim Hock Seng, were on the bridge, lying down in their long chairs. Mr. Higbet, the engineer, was in his room filling his pipe when he heard the whistle blow, and he ran out and he heard the telegraph bell ring. He had no time to reverse the engines, as the vessels just then collided. The Ngapoota was in charge of the Malay gunner. She was struck smidship on the right hand side, and sank within five minutes. The vessel carried three boats, two of which were smashed and the third got away with 48 men, including the shinchew, engineer, a few firemen, coolies, sailors, and some passengers. Some men were picked up by passing sampans. No word has been received as yet about Captain Witt. The number of passengers on board were 80, and the crew consisted of 30 men all told.

The Ngapoota is a vessel of 88 tons and 60 horse-power, and was built in Glasgow. She is owned by the Hong Hock Steamship Company, and was partly insured for $12,000. The steamer had a cargo of 1,400 slabs of tin and a quantity of gutta percha.

The Tew Tong, owned by the same Company, is at present waiting at Pangkor in search of passengers; and we understand that the Rising Dragon, which arrived here last night from Port Weld, having the shinchew and engineer of the Ngapoota and a few of the passengers on board, was despatched early this morning to discharge the Kwang Tung.

—On enquiring at the office of the owners of the Kwang Tung, we were informed that the Kwang Tung is of 147 tons, and 75 horse-power. She had a crew of 33, and was conveying 132 passengers for Teluk Anson from this port. She sailed at 4.15 p.m. on Monday with a full general cargo. In reply to a telegram despatched this morning, the owner of the Kwang Tung has received the following from Mr. G. B. Thomas, chief clerk of the Customs at Port Weld:—"Brassel, just arrived, reports Kwang Tung ashore at Telok Sera, damaged."

Telok Sera is about six miles north of Tanjong Hantu.

Captain Robinson, of the Mary Austen, kindly sends us the following account:—

On the night of 23rd instant, about 10.30 p.m. the Ngapoota left Pangkor with it is said about 130 passengers, many of them women and children, bound for Penang. She had also about 1,400 slabs of tin. All went well it being a fine, clear moonlight night) till about 12.30 a.m. on the 24th, when the Kwang Tung came apparently full speed into the starboard side of the Ngapoota. From information gathered from some of the survivors, it appears that the Kwang Tung was sighted at midnight on the starboard bow showing the signal lights in mid-head and green, and ostensibly passing on their respective courses to clear each other. My informant states that from soon after making her (the Kwang Tung) out till the sad disaster his attention was diverted from her, till loud cries from both ships announced that a collision was imminent, and on looking out from his room saw the Kwang Tung coming on almost at right angles, as if to strike amidships, which she almost immediately did on the starboard side, evidently cutting a long way into the cargo hold, which on filling rapidly burst the bulkhead between hold and engine room. The engine of the Ngapoota were stopped very shortly after the collision, and the Kwang Tung rebounded after striking and appeared to make inshore, after lowering a boat to succour the passengers, many of whom were floating on the debris. My informant managed to clear, the swaying and get over the stern. He retains no clear recollection of how he got into the boat which had been lowered from the Ngapoota. He saw one of the boats from the starboard side was smashed by the collision. The boat he was in being over-crowded, as soon after as possible was relieved by some fishermen in sampans. I think about forty persons were rescued by this one boat, which prior to being relieved was on the point of sinking.

26th April.

Captain Yue, of the steamer Tew Tong, who arrived here yesterday from Telok Anson, reports that a few hours after he left Pangkor on Tuesday night, he met the tongkang which picked up some of the crew and passengers of the stranded Kwang Tung. The tongkang was laden with tiles and was on its way to Panghor. He brought over to Penang 39 men; the remainder preferred to go on to Pangkor. He also met Capt. Cobb, who told him that after the collision he attempted to beach the vessel. He failed to do so owing to the rush of water into the engine room, which put out the fires. The steamer sank in three fathoms of water, and her awning and masts only are visible. Capt. Cobb added that with the exception of a steersman and lascar, who are missing, all on board the Kwang Tung got into the ship's boats and the tongkang. Capt. Yue later on, on Wednesday morning, picked up four men (2 Chinese, 1 Malay and a Kling) who were clinging to the masts of the vessel for about thirty-two hours. He saw a number of dead bodies drifting.

The actual loss of life is not as yet known. We estimate the loss of life at something like 50, a large proportion of it on being women and children.

CAPTAIN WITT'S ACCOUNT.

Being my watch below, I was asleep in my cabin when I was awakened by loud shouting. I ran out to see what the noise was about and was almost immediately carried off my legs by the collision. I got up and jumped forward to get clear of the awning. The ship was filling fast, and the bow went down and I went down with it. Striking out I came up and saw the stern high up in the air, and immediately it dived down. I was carried down by the inrush of the water, but struck out and rose again. When I came up I found myself alongside of a plank, and saw the Kwang Tung not far away, and a number of passengers and luggage floating about. The passengers were hailing the Kwang Tung at the top of their voices. I could see that the Kwang Tung had a very large hole on the port side. She had no boat down, and she was making for land, so I thought it was no use of going near her. I picked up all the small planks that I could find and tied them together with the strings that I found on some bundles that were floating about. After I had finished tying up the raft I saw the Kwang Tung far away. The people were still hailing to her. I even saw my deck house floating about, and a number of people about it; so I thought it was no use of going near it. I made for the shore till daylight. When day came I saw that the ebb tide was making and that I was fast being taken to the shore. After sunrise I saw two fishing boats very far away. I thought near the wreck, but after a little while I saw them sailing away. After a while I saw a very large junk coming along, and by what I could make out it was fishing. I saw the junk putting its boat out and picking up something, and then it went back to the junk. The junk sailed a little nearer and anchored, and then I saw the boat being lowered and coming along. When I saw this I took a stick from the bottom of my raft and tied a handkerchief to it and sailed out for a long time. They did not make me out, at last they came towards me, and when they came near me they threw most of the things overboard that they had picked up and took me into the junk. I then saw that they had rescued eight others besides me—3 Chinamen, 1 Kling, 1 Klinr woman, and 3 Malay women. We were all very well received. Immediately after I had gone on board they made for Penang, and next day we anchored off Krian. About 10 p.m. on the 25th we anchored off Pulo Jerjak, and had to wait there till 6 a.m. of the 26th, when we weighed anchor and made for Penang. At 10 a.m. we grounded north of Pulo Jerjak, and I asked them to let me go on shore, so they lowered their little boat and rowed me to Ujong Pasir where I landed. The junk's number is 154.

SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

In his recent inaugural address, the President of the French Society of Civil Engineers, M. du Bosquet, pointed out that express trains daily attain 75 miles an hour on down grades, proving that such speeds are not dangerous. But the engines are not sufficiently powerful to maintain such speeds on a level. A drawbar pull which would give 15 miles an hour on a down grade of 1 in 200 would give only 6¾ miles on a level, and 3¼ miles on an up grade of 1 in 200. A slight increase in the average speed greatly increases the power required. If 323 horse power will draw a train at 50 miles an hour up an incline of 1 in 200, for a speed of 125 miles 2,960 horse power would be necessary. High speeds, moreover, increase the weight of the engines per horse power, and there is a limit beyond which the engines could not move themselves. At their maximum power, the modern French locomotives weigh about 158 pounds per indicated horse power; but a similar engine of 160 tons, generating 2,000 hor

By the death of Professor Robertson Smith the Encyclopædia Britannica loses an able editor, and England a distinguished scholar. In the domain of biblical criticism Professor Robertson Smith has done work of great and enduring value, and it is painful to remember that there was a time when his candid pursuit of truth in the departments of theological study to which he gave his energies caused him to be accused of heresy and ejected from the professorship which he held at the Free Church College at Aberdeen.

It is now the fashion amongst the givers of smart dances in New York to send the programmes to their intended guests with the invitations. Of course the result of this is that many of the most eligible of the guests have their cards virtually filled up before they enter the ballroom. Thus, to use sporting language, the principal starters in the various events are known some days before they face the flag. But really these New Yorkers are getting a little too previous. Next we shall hear that hostesses are sending round their ball supper with the invitations, and then there will be no need to have the dance at all.

The rumour that Princess Clémentine, the youngest daughter of the King and Queen of the Belgians, contemplates taking the veil appears to be fully confirmed. Her decision is said to have been arrived at three years ago, when her cousin Prince Baldwin of Flanders, to whom she was engaged, died so suddenly of fever. She kept her resolve secret until she came of age last year, but she has never swerved from it, nor can she be moved to reconsider a determination which will condemn to a convent one of the most charming, accomplished, and wealthy Princesses in Europe. The utmost concession that she has been induced to make is the postponement of her novitiate until after the wedding of Princess Josephine, which seems now to be fixed for Whitsuntide.

An interesting, though demoralising, tale comes to the St. James's Gazette from a sporting centre in the Midlands. A party of hunting men (unemployed) were amusing themselves with "drawing" a young lady who professed to have the clairvoyant gift. "Can you dream a race?" she was asked. "Of course I could," she replied. "Well then," they went on, "could you spot the winner of the Grand National?" "Why not?" she replied. Why Not! They jumped at the omen; out they went to the telegraph office and put their money on that excellent animal! Only one of them, a superior person who does not believe in dreams and nonsense, refused to take the heaven-sent hint, and he has not since been fit to speak to. Obviously this is not a story that should be told to any member of the Society for the Suppression of Gambling. We present it to the Psychical Researchers.

Isn't there some mistake (writes a correspondent) in the story of Thackeray's failure as a public speaker, which I see is being freely quoted in the press? As I have always understood, the occasion was not a political one at all, though Mr. Bright was present; it was the opening of the Manchester Athenæum—that institution which has done so much for culture of all sorts in Lancashire. Dickens was there also, and Lord Lytton, and Childs, the American publisher, who sat next to Thackeray. When Thackeray was called upon to address the audience he got up and said: "Mr. Chairman, my lords, ladies, and gentlemen." There he stopped, and there was a long pause of expectation. Then he commenced de novo: "Mr. Chairman, my lords, ladies, and gentlemen," and, after another pause, incontinently sat down. Amid the "sensation" thus created, he turned to Childs and said, "My dear sir, you have just missed the finest speech you ever heard." I believe Childs told the story thus himself; at any rate, it is at least a "better-found" tale than the rather dull one now going the round of the press.

None of the obituary writers on the late Louis Kossuth, says the Pall Mall Budget, seems to have referred to an incident in his career which must always have a special interest for Englishmen. This was one of the most famous record rides of ancient or modern times, performed by Captain Charles Townley, a Queen's messenger, in the interest of the Hungarian Liberator. After the collapse of his cause in 1849, Kossuth, and a crowd of his compatriots had fled to Turkey, from which Austria and Russia were menacingly demanding their extradition. But the "great Elchi," who was then our representative on the Golden Horn, made bold, upon his own responsibility, to back up the Sultan in his refusal to deliver up the fugitives, believing that Palmerston, who was then at the Foreign Office, would bear him out in his firm attitude of opposition. Knowing that life and death depended on the speedy arrival of his approving despatch at Stamboul, "Pam" selected Captain Townley to be its bearer, with intructions "not to spare himself or others" in getting to his destination as soon as possible. Reaching Belgrade on October 20, Captain Townley there took horse, and on the morning of the 28th he rode, or rather reeled, into Pera, having covered the distance of 820 miles in 131 hours—a feat which elicited loud applause when mention was made of it in the House of Commons.

The Victorian Postmaster-General, the other day, received a letter of inquiry from a resident of West Virginia, U.S.A., as follows:—"Dear Sir,—The World's Fair in Chicago has brought many to believe that Australia will yet be the country. As I have a family of four boys that will soon be young men I am anxious to bring my family to a good healthy country. Would you please give me a history of Australia—the climate, the land and its price per acre, grain and the kind you grow, timber and the different kinds, stock the different kinds their prices; is it a good sheep country, their prices; what is a good horse worth, are their wild ponies their, is their game plain and what kind; are the natives dangers, do they ever trouble the white people; the ore, have you gold and silver; have you mountains, is it timber land or prairie; have you churches, Sabbath-schools, &c., also schools in general; the price of groceries, clothing, boots and shoes, general goods of every discription; please send me one of your local papers; have you factorys and what kind, have you railroads; how are wages for laboring men, what trades would suit your country the best, have you snow in winter and how long, when do you start seeding and when does harvest end, have you good hunting and what kind, have you good hounds for hunting, what would it cost from your place to the United States, say New York or San Francisco?" "A first cousin of mine left Canada (Ont.) a few years ago, and went to Australia. If you are anything about him please give me his address. I have asked many questions; please answer with any other information you can give me."
